BERLIN (AP)—A Communist East German border guard slapped a U. S. Army officer in the face Sunday, the Army said Tuesday. The American followed standing instructions and did not retaliate.

American officers in West Berlin were incensed when they learned of the apparently unprovoked incident.

An Army spokesman said the incident occurred in East Berlin near Checkpoint Charlie, the crossing point for non-Germans through the Red wall.

Goldwater Tops 800 Vote Mark

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater topped the 800 mark Tuesday as previously uncommitted delegates scrambled to get aboard his bandwagon bound for the Republican presidential nomination.

The Associated Press survey of the 1,308 delegates showed the Arizona senator with 804 first ballot votes—149 more than the 655 needed for nomination—compared with 169 credited to Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania, his closest rival.

Rich Indicted On Tax Evasion

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—John B. Rich, Pottsville coal operator and victim of a sensational 1959 burglary, was indicted by a federal grand jury Tuesday on charges of evading both personal and corporate income tax payments.

The jury also indicted Rich's son, John W., and the chief clerk of his Gilbertson Coal Co., in connection with the alleged evasion of corporate income taxes. The son is the vice president of the company.

The 71-year-old Rich is accused of evading payment of $82,382 in personal income taxes for 1958, 1959 and 1960.

Erect Tombstone For Louis Bova

POTTSVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Plans to recover the body of Louis Bova, missing since a mine cave-in at Shepleton in August 1963, were abandoned Tuesday. Instead a tombstone will be erected at the site.

The agreement was reached in Schuylkill County Court Tuesday between the Pennsylvania Department of Mines and the co-owners of the mine, Eugene Gibbons and David Fellin. Fellin and a co-worker, Henry Throne, were dramatically rescued from the mine after the cave-in.

Desegregation Plan Published

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—The Jackson School Board announced Tuesday the first public school desegregation plan in Mississippi.

Mississippi now is the only state without some public school integration below the college level.

The first grade of Jackson's public schools will be integrated starting in September.

The announcement from the board of trustees of the Jackson Municipal Separate School System came on the eve of a federal court deadline for submitting the plan.

Segregationist Mayor Elected

CAMBRIDGE, Md. (AP)—Ossvey C. Pritchett, 62, a plumbing contractor, was elected mayor of this racially divided city Tuesday, 1,991-1,451 over S. Charles Walls Jr., who had the support of integrationists here.

Pritchett had been backed by the Dorchester Business & Citizens Association, of which he is a member. The group led a successful fight to defeat a public accommodations amendment to the town charter last Oct. 1.

Market Prices Close Low

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market made a move Tuesday toward recovery of the firm uphill stride of recent weeks but it turned out to be a faint. Prices on the New York Stock Exchange closed lower after a flurry of late selling.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed at 843.63, off 1.92.

Lights Go On In Barrett

MOUNTAINHOME — Street lights went on for the first time in Barrett Twp. last night culminating 18 months of work by the Barrett Community Club.

On hand at dusk to watch the lights begin to glow and then reach the height of illumination were club members, township supervisors and Ralph Reppert, district manager of PP&L.

Also present were Atty. Elmer D. Christine, township solicitor and his wife.

Lights, of a mercury-vapor type specifically engineered for street lighting, were installed along the main arteries in the community.

Annual costs of approximately $992 will pay for the 20 lights installed. The cost was budgeted by the township supervisors this year with no rise in tax millage.

Community Improvement According to Roger Lindsey, chairman of the board of supervisors, the lights are the beginning of community improvement, and offered congratulations to Mrs. Russell Brush, chairman of the club's community improvement project.

Stanley Bender and L. M. Caruthers, supervisors, were on hand for the ceremonies.

Mrs. Harold Kreck, past president of the club, received congratulations from Reppert on the "club's community spirit."

Reppert also said, "The lights automatically turn on at dusk and off at dawn daily." They are activated automatically by photo electric cells.

Scranton Not A Candidate For VP

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Gov. William W. Scranton said Tuesday "I do not think it would be helpful to our party" if he were to run for vice president on a Republican ticket headed by Sen. Barry Goldwater.

The Pennsylvania governor told newsmen he is sure the Democrats would be glad to exploit the differences between himself and the Arizona senator on some fundamental issues.

Scranton made these comments in denying—for the 20th time as he put it—that there is any chance he will seek or accept the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

Scranton also denied emphatically that he is considering withdrawing from the race for top place on the ticket before the balloting starts Wednesday.

"No," snapped Scranton when a newsmen asked about rumors that he and his chief advisers were considering such a move.

"Don't listen to those things," the governor declared.

Scranton's statement was confirmed by one of his advisers, Francis McCabe, chairman of the Scott Paper Co. McCabe laughed off the suggestion as "Goldwater rumor mongering."

Scranton said it is his understanding that Goldwater also had made it quite clear he is looking elsewhere for a running mate.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Dwight D. Eisenhower denied Tuesday that he has urged Sen. Barry Goldwater, if he becomes the Republican presidential nominee, to take Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania as his running mate.

The former president was asked by newsmen about a report that he had been urging Goldwater to put Scranton, his rival for the nomination, on the ticket in the No. 2 spot.

"I haven't said a word of that even to myself," Eisenhower declared.

Old Battle Plan Tricks Vietnamese

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—A battle plan used successfully by guerrillas in Indochina for 17 years was followed by Communist Viet Cong forces who ambushed a relief convoy, killing three American officers and 16 Vietnamese soldiers.

Baited Trap They baited the trap Monday by attacking the district capital of Chon Thanh on bloody Route 13, which connects Saigon with the Cambodian border 80 miles to the north.

Then they pounced on the convoy of 16 vehicles dispatched southward from Hoi Quan to assist the Chon Thanh forces.

After destroying part of Chon Thanh and killing six civilians with heavy mortar fire, the Viet

Easton Woman Backs Barry In Revolt Against Scranton

By Robert Van Fleet
Chief, Ottawa News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — With language both classically, literally and politically potent, Mrs. Francis Chase, a school teacher-delegate from Easton, declared her independence from Gov. Scranton yesterday and announced she will cast her first ballot vote for Barry Goldwater.

The decision of the English and Latin teacher, and the contents of her four-page statement, have jolted the faltering Scranton leadership, and are indicative of the continuing erosion of Scranton support, even within the 64-vote Pennsylvania delegation itself.

In her scathing statement, Mrs. Chase released a scathing rebuttal of policies, foreign and domestic, and denunciation of those who "have for years been filling the air with sanctimonious hymns to their principles."

Was Uncommitted Mrs. Chase's action came after she had held out for two days, saying she preferred to stay "uncommitted." Her final decision, however, squared with previous indications of her conservative position.

Both on the convention floor and in the rules committee, of which she is one of two Pennsylvania members, Mrs. Chase voted against proposals that would have prevented the seating of delegates selected through discriminatory practices.

She also voted against a resolution in the rules committee for secret ballots in the nomination of the presidential candidate.

There was no comment from Scranton headquarters on the statement by Mrs. Chase, except to say her defection spotlighted the number of Pennsylvania delegates who have publicly announced they will support the Arizona senator.

2 to 20 Votes Other possible or "soft" votes for Goldwater are estimated at between two and 20. Those, in addition to Mrs. Chase, who have announced they will support Goldwater, are Theodore Haines of Bolivar in Westmoreland County and Edward S. Swartz of Hummelstown, who were elected as Goldwater delegates, and Blair F. Bannister of Pittsburgh, who has announced his support subsequent to election.

State GOP chairman, Craig T. Tux, declined to comment on Mrs. Chase's statement, referring such questions to Lt. Gov. Raymond Shafer, who is vice chairman of the delegation. Shafer could not be reached for comment.

Parsons Critical However, Edward S. Parsons, Pike County prothonotary, and Mrs. Chase's co-delegate, expressed strong disapproval of Mrs. Chase's decision.

He confirmed his continued support to "the governor of my state" and said Mrs. Chase was mistaken.

In her criticisms of liberal government policies, Mrs. Chase described the country as "outmaneuvered . . . beguiled or duped" in international affairs.

She said foreign policy has been conducted for the past 30 years, "by men with blind stagers, a brace of old ladies with aida boards, and only the Lord knows how many traitors."

Mrs. Chase bases her opinion on wide reading and a good many years in party politics, including eight years as vice chairman of the Northampton County committee.

In the past, however, she has been active in support of Gov. Scranton. She also worked in the unsuccessful effort to elect Robert Bartlett of Bethlehem, who campaigned to fill the congressional seat left open by the death of Francis E. (Tad) Walter and won by Fred B. Rooney, Bethlehem Democrat.

Mrs. Chase hopes to be recognized when the state delegation holds its caucus, and to deliver her statement to the delegation at that time.

"I am unwilling," Mrs. Chase declared, "that my vote be cast to maintain control of my party by men whose past manipulations indicate their ethics permit them any means to their ends."

Howell and Owens were charged with conspiring to commit a felony and held under $1,000 bond. Police said there were no immediate indications they were members of the Ku Klux Klan.

The highway patrol said Howell was driving the car that stopped by the church and another man got out. When the shots were fired by Wilson County Deputy Sheriff Dave Daniels, the man jumped back into the car as it moved away.

James R. Jones, grand dragon of the North Carolina Klan, made two appearances at the country church, warning each time against an integrated project. Jones was not available for comment Tuesday at his home in Granite Quarry.

Defies Klan Integrated Group Paints Negro Church

ELM CITY, N.C. (AP)—An integrated group defied the Ku Klux Klan on Tuesday and began painting a rural Negro church a few hours after someone tried to burn the building.

Five highway patrolmen stood by at the First Presbyterian church and 24 others were nearby on standby basis when about 17 white and Negro adults started fixing up the old frame building.

Troopers Remain Highway patrol Maj. C. R. Williams said one or two troopers would remain at the church Tuesday night and 10 others would be nearby.

Early Tuesday morning, two young men from nearby Rocky Mount were arrested after someone poured gasoline on the steps of the church and was about to light it when a deputy sheriff on guard fired two warn-

State Delegates Delay Caucus

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A caucus of the Pennsylvania delegation to the Republican national convention was delayed a second time Tuesday, apparently in an attempt to keep a revolt against Gov. William W. Scranton from breaking into the open.

Leaders of the delegation are seeking to avoid a tally of Keystone state delegates until shortly before the first ballot for the presidential nomination Wednesday, one source said.

The source close to Lt. Gov. Raymond Shafer, vice chairman of the delegation, said the delay in caucus was to keep together as much of the delegation as possible while Scranton sought delegate support from other states in his bid for the nomination.

Before the series of government changes in Saigon and the accompanying setup of the Viet Cong attacks, the United States had started reducing the approximately 16,500 advisors, trainers and pilots aiding the South Vietnamese military.

Of the 600, about 200 to 300 will be additional Special Forces experts to bring the total of those forces up to about 1,600 and the over-all U.S. total strength to about 15,000.

This information became available Tuesday in Washington along with additional word on the infiltration of North Vietnamese regular army personnel and equipment into South Viet Nam.

Ike Asks Party Unity; Barry Near Nomination

Ex-President Slams Meaningless Slogans

COW PALACE, San Francisco (AP)—Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower on Tuesday night urged Republicans to avoid the perils of factional strife and renew their "strength from the fountain of unity."

The man who led the Republican party to two of its greatest election victories was given a warm, enthusiastic welcome to a convention about to pick a new leader to head the party in the 1964 campaign.

Signs proclaiming "We Still Like Ike" and "Welcome, Ike and Mamie" were paraded through the Cow Palace as Eisenhower and his wife, both radiant and beaming, walked down the long platform to the speaker's rostrum. The applause was thunderous.

At times the delegates listened in solemn silence, at times broke into applause, as Eisenhower counseled the party against being torn apart by sectional differences.

The former president, who had kept out of the battle over the GOP nomination, pleaded for the party to stick to the basic doctrine of Republicanism instead of being drawn into "a whirlpool of factional strife."

Beloved Man In his introduction of Eisenhower, Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana called him "the most widely beloved man of our age."

There was no mistaking the warmth of the welcome the former president got. And when he gave the delegates and the packed galleries his famous arms-raised salute, they responded with even louder cheers.

Eisenhower told the convention the Republicans can—and should—compete among themselves.

Slogan, Labels He added, "can we afford to permit ourselves to be led astray by meaningless slogans, labels, preconceived notions and prejudice; we shall not be if we cleave to the straight path of principle and common sense."

At one point, Eisenhower told the delegates, "We must learn that when any Republican concerns himself too much in condemning this or that faction of decent people in the party, he is hurting himself and the party."

He also said at another point, "We should reject as well those who misguided, through extremist economic nostrums and wishful thinking in foreign affairs, would weaken or deliberately destroy this Republic."

vention officials a plank defending responsible criticism and the right of dissent and adding: "We repudiate the efforts of irresponsible, extremist groups, such as the John Birch Society and others, to discredit our party by their efforts to infiltrate positions of responsibility in the party, or to attach themselves to its candidates."

Eisenhower thought no one organization should be singled out, so the Scrantonites considered dropping the reference to the John Birch Society. Goldwater has declined to renounce the support of society members.

Futile Fight In advance, the platform fight looked almost as futile as Scranton's too-late bid for the presidential nomination.

This was the nub of the fight: Civil Rights—The committee plank promised implementation and execution of the new civil rights law for going beyond this to urge a number of steps, such as strengthening the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department and trimming the number of congressmen in their states that deny segments of their citizens the vote. It mentions constitutional rights but drops a previous demand that the plank declare the law is unconstitutional. Goldwater voted against it on grounds two key sections are unconstitutional.

Extremist Groups—The Platform Committee rejected any plank on them. Scranton forces filed with committee.

New Party Alignment She called for a realignment of parties, "based on political philosophy," rather than parties based on coalition and political expediency.

U.S. Troops Dispatched To Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. military manpower in South Viet Nam will be increased by about 600 men during the next few months to restore part of the cutback which was started last year.

Leonid Brezhnev

Brezhnev Replaces Mikoyan

MOSCOW (AP)—First Deputy Premier Anastas I. Mikoyan will soon replace Leonid I. Brezhnev as Soviet president, informed Russian sources said Tuesday.

Brezhnev, a likely successor to Premier Khrushchev, is being relieved of the ceremonial title of president so he can concentrate on his key jobs in the Communist party, the source of power.

Mikoyan, an old Bolshevik high in the party and government since early in the Stalin era and now a confidante of Khrushchev, will become president in the next few days, the informants added.

The sources said the changes will be announced soon.

Another Report Another report circulating in Moscow but without confirmation said that Khrushchev's son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubai, 40, will become foreign minister in the autumn. He is editor of the government newspaper Izvestia.

This report was treated with skepticism by diplomatic sources who accepted the presidential changes as probable.

The full designation of the Soviet president is chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet. It is a figurehead job.

At 12:30 (Eastern DST) this morning, the Scranton amendment against extremism and the John Birch Society was defeated more than two to one on a standing vote.

Pennsylvania Senator Hugh Scott introduced the amendment and New York Governor Nelson Rockefeller spoke sharply against Communism on the left and Birchites on the right.

Nuclear Weapons—The platform is silent on this, too. But Goldwater has said it might be wise to give the commander of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization some discretion to use small, tactical nuclear weapons. Only the president of the United States can authorize such use now and the proposed substitute would reaffirm this under "the historic constitutional precept of civilian control over the military."

4-Hour Job On July 9—nearly five weeks after he entered Children's Memorial Hospital—Radovan underwent four-hour heart surgery by a team headed by "Dr. Potts."

"Dr. Potts" is how the lad's father, Dimitrije, 41, pronounced the name of Dr. Willis J. Potts, whose fame as a heart surgeon has spread to Europe.

It was the only English he knew in his otherwise completely Serbian vocabulary.

Dimitrije had $10 left after paying passage on a freighter which brought him and his youngster from Belgrade to Chicago, a voyage that took 36 days. Now he faces the problem of getting passage money home.

During the operation, Dr. Potts said Tuesday, the surgeons found the left branch of the pulmonary artery was missing.

Never Before "We have never run into a situation like this before in all the 2,500 blue baby heart operations we've done here at Children's Memorial," Dr. Potts said.

"And, if you ask me if I was frightened, I'll tell you I was," Dr. Potts said that finding the missing artery meant doing the operation in a way it had never been done before. It meant exploring the heart to find the end of the pulmonary artery, locating the constriction near its very beginning and moving up to a spot well above this to which the artery from the arm could be attached, and finally swinging it around and fitting it into place with tiny stitches. All that, Dr. Potts added without stopping for an instant that tiny flow of blood through the boy's one pulmonary artery.

Anxious Lad But now the lad who was unable to walk, play or go to school is gay, playful and anxious to return to Yugoslavia and his mother and 4-year-old sister.

Radovan's father is staying with his brother-in-law, Sam Jolic, who runs a small grocery on the Northwest Side.

William W. Scranton

Letters Lose Votes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A top aide to Sen. Barry Goldwater said Tuesday Gov. William W. Scranton's bitterly worded letter has "just hardened our delegates like a rock."

"It's moved a lot of other delegates towards us," said Dean Burch, assistant director of the Goldwater campaign.

In fact, some Goldwater aides called the letter Scranton's farewell address. And John Grenier, the senator's southern regional director, called it a suicide note.

An Insult Goldwater, in a note he wrote Republican leaders Sunday night said "I consider it an insult to every Republican in San Francisco."

In the letter, Scranton, Goldwater's chief rival for the nomination, charged the senator's forces have "bought, beaten and compromised" delegates.

Scranton said Monday that he did not write the letter, did not see it before it was sent and regards some of the wording as too strong. But he said he thinks the basic points it seeks to make are valid and accepts responsibility for it.

Goldwater aides agree that they do not think Scranton read the letter before it was sent.

HARRISBURG (AP)—They're talking about the LETTER in Harrisburg—some with a tone of amusement, others with a sense of bewilderment.

Walk through the State Capitol Tuesday and you could see groups of state employees huddled in animated conversation about developments at the Republican national convention in San Francisco.

Their favorite topic was the now famous caustic letter under the signature of Gov. Scranton sent to Sen. Barry Goldwater challenging him to debate his views before the convention delegates.

Republicans, for the most part are shaking their heads, wondering: "What made them do it?"

Alabama Court Blocks Racial Order

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—A three-judge federal court Monday refused to order state-wide desegregation of Alabama public schools but directed state authorities to "promote and encourage" integration.

The court ordered Gov. George C. Wallace and the Alabama Board of Education to refrain from interfering in the future with any court order which may be handed down to do away with segregation.

Wallace used state troopers last year to delay the admission of Negroes to white schools, in some instances blocking them from entering the school buildings.

Ranging From Income Tax To Nuclear Weapons

Barry Switches Position On Nine Top Issues

By Congressional Quarterly
WASHINGTON — (CQ) — A review of Sen. Barry Goldwater's views on nine top controversial issues, ranging from nuclear weapons to the income tax, show that he has changed his position on virtually every issue but that he has never taken some of the most controversial stands attributed to him by his opponents.

Goldwater has not, for example, ever proposed outright abolition of the income tax or doing away with the Social Security system.

On the other hand, the record clearly demonstrates that he has recommended making Social Security voluntary, has urged the use of low-yield atomic weapons in Southeast Asia, has urged immediate U.S. withdrawal from the United Nations and has backed a national "right to work" law—all stands he has now modified significantly.

Here is a rundown of Goldwater's views, past and present, on the nine major issues:

Nuclear Weapons
Opponents have charged Goldwater with having an impulsive, irresponsible attitude toward the use of nuclear weapons. In 1960 he suggested that the U.S. should have confronted the Soviet Union with an ultimatum to withdraw from Hungary at the time of the 1956 revolution and should have been prepared, if the ultimatum were rejected, "to move a highly mobile task force equipped with appropriate nuclear weapons to the scene of the revolt."

In 1961 he asked: "What would be wrong with a tactical decision to use a very low-yield bomb on the mountain passes between Russia and Iran, should a war or the possibility of a war develop as between those countries? It would do nothing but disturb a mass of mountain rock and close the passes." In 1963 Goldwater said: "I'd drop a low-yield atomic bomb on Chinese supply lines in North Viet Nam."

Most of the earlier Goldwater proposals drew little public attention. But when, as leading contender for the 1964 Republican Presidential nomination, he suggested May 24 of this year that "defoliation of the forest (in Viet Nam) by low-yield atomic weapons could well be done," opponents accused him of a reckless policy. Goldwater immediately said his statement had been "misinterpreted," that he favored use of conventional weapons when they could do the job.

Test Ban Treaty
Another major source of controversy about Goldwater's stand has been his vote against the 1963 Limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty. It has been suggested by some Goldwater partisans that he opposed it simply because of insufficient safeguards.

The record shows that Goldwater suggested numerous other reasons for voting against the treaty. These included his fear that no treaty would be honored by the U.S.S.R., his concern that it would leave the Soviets in a superior technical position in regard to the use of high yield weapons, his belief that the treaty "envisions a non-aggression pact between the NATO nations and... the Warsaw Pact nations," and his fear of other secret deals by the Kennedy Administration.

"Today there aren't 10 men in America who know the full truth about Cuba, all the facts about the Test Ban Treaty, or the commitments made on behalf of this nation with governments dedicated to the idea of destroying us," Goldwater said Sept. 11, 1963. In a recent statement he said that as President he would "abrogate the treaty" if he found it "detrimental" to U.S. interests to adhere to it.

Diplomatic Ties With U.S.S.R.
Goldwater is deeply suspicious of the Soviet Union and other Communist countries and has frequently advocated severing diplomatic relations. "We should declare the world Communist movement an outlaw and sever ties immediately," Goldwater said in 1960. "I have always favored withdrawing recognition from Russia. I never favored recognition from the start. I don't like to lend dignity and respect to an outfit that says they're out to bury us," he declared in 1963.

Goldwater's latest stand differs: "The possibility of withdrawing recognition should be maintained as a bargaining device, as a lever that might be used at a moment when most advantageous to the interests of the United States. Withdrawal might not come this year or next or at all, but the very threat would be of great value to the U.S. in its negotiations with the Communists," he said this spring.

United Nations
Up to 1964, all of Goldwater's writing reflected a deep suspicion of the United Nations. He feared that U.S. involvement could be against the country's best interests or threaten U.S. sovereignty. His most frequent position was that the U.S. should withdraw from the U.N. if Red China were admitted. In December 1961, however, he became so upset with the U.N.'s role in Katanga and India that he advocated immediate U.S. withdrawal regardless of the Chinese entry.

Goldwater subsequently returned to his position that the U.S. should stick with the U.N. unless Red China gained admittance. In January 1964 he attacked Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller (R-N.Y.) for saying that he (Goldwater) had advocated leaving the U.N. "I can't recall ever having said that," Goldwater said.

Goldwater's latest stand reads: "I believe in the United Nations. I feel that the United Nations can be made more effective, and I'd like to see us try to make it more effective

Sen. Barry Goldwater

"We have to face the realities of life; the chances of Red China coming into this organization grow every day. In that event the United States... would be forced to undertake a serious re-assessment of its basic commitments."

Welfare
Goldwater has been criticized for an allegedly callous attitude toward public welfare recipients. The record shows he has been especially critical of federal involvement in welfare programs. "Let welfare be a private concern," he said in 1960. Ideally, in his view, the family, private or religious organizations should take care of charity needs. Barring that, welfare should be taken care of by local government.

Goldwater feels that receipt of welfare payments is demeaning to an individual, that welfare recipients should be required to work, and that "low intelligence or low ambition" are the major reasons that people remain on the welfare rolls.

To date, there has been no indication of a softening of Goldwater's position on this issue. On July 7 he and his political ally, Sen. John G. Tower (R-Texas), were the only two members of the Senate Labor Committee to vote against reporting to President Johnson's anti-poverty program.

TVA
Goldwater stirred up a storm of protest in the Tennessee Valley when he suggested last October that the Tennessee Valley Authority be sold because it "would be better operated and would be of more benefit for more people if it were part of private industry."

Goldwater's distaste for TVA was not new. In 1957 he said: "TVA was conceived in socialism, born during a period of economic chaos and has been nurtured and expanded in defeat." And in 1961: "TVA is no sacred cow as far as I'm concerned. It is an unfortunate socialist adventure."

Opposition to his stand in the Tennessee Valley, however, prompted Goldwater last February to clarify it. He said he still favored selling TVA "but this hardly means that I propose to abolish all TVA services." He said that TVA functions which have counterparts in other national programs (soil conservation, flood control, etc.) should be given to other federal agencies while unique TVA services (steam-generating plants, etc.) would be transferred to the states, private industry or a special corporation such as that formed for communications satellites.

Income Tax
Goldwater is an implacable foe of high Government spending and taxation. He considers the 16th Amendment, which legalized the income tax, "a very poor amendment." But is pessimistic about the chances of completely eliminating the income tax. He has never advocated its outright repeal, despite charges to that effect by his opponents.

In 1960, Goldwater condemned the progressive feature of the income tax in such sweeping terms as to suggest that it should be immediately replaced by a flat rate tax. "Government has a right to claim an equal percentage of each man's wealth and no more," he said. "The graduated income tax is a confiscatory tax."

In 1962 and 1964, however, Goldwater has said that reduction of the progressive feature and he no longer promises a straight flat rate—should come as part of a complete overhaul of the tax code. "Though he believes in lower taxes," Goldwater voted against the 1964 Revenue Act which reduced personal and corporate income tax liabilities by $11.5 billion over two years. He pointed to the lack of corresponding reductions in Government expenditures and the dangers of inflation, to explain his vote.

Social Security
Goldwater has been sternly critical of the Social Security system, sound Social Security system and I want to see it strengthened."

Right To Work
Goldwater strongly opposes the power of labor unions "to compel workers to join the union as a condition of continued employment." He has strongly supported so-called "right to work" laws, though he currently prefers the term "voluntary unionism."

In 1958, Goldwater introduced a law which would have erased all state laws permitting the union shop—in other words, a mandatory national "right to work" law. His major 1963 labor bill, however, would permit the union shop in states which have laws specifically permitting such an arrangement. In states with no legislation on the subject, it would be illegal. In a 1963 Senate speech Goldwater said he would "never vote for a so-called national right to work law."

Civil Rights
Goldwater voted for the 1957 and 1960 Civil Rights Acts, which dealt primarily with voting rights. But he voted for most weakening amendments to both bills. He voted against the cloture motion necessary to stop the Southern filibuster against the 1964 Civil Rights Act. He voted for amendments to delete the public accommodations and fair employment practices titles in the bill. He then voted against the measure on final passage, saying he could have supported it if those two titles had not been included. He said the titles were unconstitutional and would require a "police state" for enforcement.

Ironically, Goldwater himself had been a co-sponsor in 1953 of a bill making discrimination by an employer or a labor organization an unfair labor practice. The impact and implementation would have been much like that of the fair employment practices section of the 1964 Act. Among co-sponsors of the 1953 measure was Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.).

As a rule, however, Goldwater has been highly critical of federal action to enforce civil rights, suggesting that the problem should be left to the states.

In 1960, for instance, he argued that the Constitution left education problems exclusively under control of the states and that he was therefore "not impressed by the claim that the Supreme Court's (1954) decision on school integration is the law of the land... The Constitution is what its authors intended it to be and said it was—not what the Supreme Court says it is."

In 1963, Goldwater modified that stand, saying that under some conditions he might, as President, use federal force to obtain compliance with school desegregation decisions of the courts.

In a press conference June 30, 1964 in Chicago, Goldwater said he would definitely "uphold" and enforce the 1964 Civil Rights Act if elected President. He said anyone serving as President under the bill would have to "accept increases of the police forces on a federal level." He added: "I hope to God that civil rights doesn't get into the campaign at all."

State News Roundup

Scranton Airport Hearing Set

HARRISBURG (AP)—A hearing has been scheduled for July 30 in Wilkes-Barre on an application by Trans World Airlines, Inc., to abandon service to the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre and Wilkes-Barre airports.

The Public Utility Commission said Monday the hearing will be held at 10 a. m. in the county courthouse.

TWA said Allegany Airlines could serve the areas adequately if the application were approved by the PUC.

Commissioners of Lackawanna and Luzerne counties joined airport officials in opposing the petition, the PUC said.

Sales Offenders Face Prosecution

HARRISBURG (AP)—Pennsylvania merchants who "misapplied" sales tax collections may be prosecuted for embezzlement, the State Revenue Department said Monday.

The department announced the decision was affirmed recently by the State Supreme Court which ruled the collections are "held in trust for the Commonwealth."

Any persons who of the monies constitute "an embezzlement of these funds," the department continued in reviewing the court decision.

The department said there presently are some 100 cases awaiting trial in connection with the decision.

Conviction carries with it a fine of $5,000 and/or five years in jail, the department said.

Burlington Bridge Hearing

PALMYRA, N. J. (AP)—The Burlington County Bridge Commission says it is strongly opposed to the destruction or removal of either the Burlington-Bristol or Tacony-Palmyra bridge.

A new Burlington-Bristol bridge has been proposed by the Delaware River Joint Toll Bridge Commission. The commission will meet on July 23 in Morrisville, Pa., and all interested persons will be heard.

A statement by the Burlington commission Monday night said the commission will not oppose any new bridge for which a need is proved, but will vigorously oppose "the destruction of existing crossings to provide the need for additional crossings."

The Burlington commission said that "to remove either bridge would be a disservice to the residents and economy of the entire Delaware Valley."

State VFW Holds Convention

PITTSBURGH (AP)—An estimated 10,000 persons are expected for the 45th annual convention of the Pennsylvania Veterans of Foreign Wars.

A memorial service was on the agenda Tuesday night to honor the dead of all wars.

John A. Jenkins, senior vice commander of the National VFW, will keynote the official opening of the five-day convention Wednesday at a joint session of the veterans and their auxiliaries.

Drum and bugle corps and drill teams will compete for prizes in a parade in downtown Pittsburgh Friday.

Rails Passenger Vanishing

By GIL MURRAY
Daily Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — Thirty years ago vacationers from New York and Philadelphia caught their first glimpse of the imposing Delaware Water Gap while sitting over the incessant click, click, of a railroad passenger car.

That was because during the heyday of the "Iron Horse," tourists from the city—heading for a holiday in the Pocono Mountains—came to the Gap and points north in trains.

No more, however. The advent of super highways in the Poconos and an ever increasing number of private automobiles have made railroad travel to Monroe County almost outdated.

75 Per Cent Drop
Henry Mushock of Mt. Bethel, station master for the Erie-

Lackawanna Railroad in East Stroudsburg, said yesterday, "30 years ago there were 75 per cent more train passengers than there are today."

Mushock, a veteran railroad employee, said, "During the height of the resort season 30 years ago, we had 10 or 11 trains going through the mountains every day. People not only came from New York, but also came up on the Pennsylvania Railroad from Trenton and Philadelphia."

"Our station here had spots reserved for hotels on the platform. Some of the signs are still there, but when a passenger gets off a train here today, he has to call his resort or get a lift. Years ago the big resorts not every train," Mushock said. The station master pointed out the railroad passenger trade fluctuates from day to day and from season to season, "but it is decreasing all the time."

Excursion Trains
Mushock said in the old days railroads would run special excursion trains from New York and Philadelphia to Delaware Water Gap. "Those trains were loaded with tourists," he said.

C. E. Folk, for 30 years the station master at the Cresco train station, said, "There is no comparison between today and 30 years ago. In those days we had crowds on every train. Today if we have a couple of crowded trains a week we are lucky."

"There was a restaurant and newsstand across from the station and taxis met every train. Today the restaurant and newsstand are out of business and taxis come to the station only when someone calls," Folk said. Folk also said he thought the heyday of the passenger train was better for the resort business.

Shorter Visits
"Tourists used to ship their trunks to a resort and stay for three or four weeks. Today everyone comes to the mountains by car and carries their own clothes."

"They don't stay as long either. They stay for a few days and then drive to the seashore or someplace else," Folk pointed out.

Trains weren't the only type of transportation hurt by building better highways and more automobiles.

Taxi companies were hurt to an extent that the 24 county taxi companies in existence 30 years ago have been reduced to five.

Irving Karpe, owner of the Yellow Cab Co., in Stroudsburg, said on top of going out of business, cab companies have had to lower rates.

"Thirty years ago a driver would get $5 a person for driving to a resort, and he would have seven or eight persons going and coming. Today we get $2.50 for the same trip and we seldom have a load," Karpe said.

He said 30 years ago, in Delaware Water Gap alone, there were three taxi companies.

Weekend Business
Karpe said tourists can travel so fast the resort season is being cut down from a three or four month business to "more of a weekend business."

How are people who don't own cars getting to the Poconos?

Every Friday more than 1,000 people get off buses in Stroudsburg, according to Mrs. Edith Rittenhouse, ticket agent for both Greyhound and Martz Lines in Stroudsburg.

Bigger Bus Travel
"Bus travel has increased by 50 per cent in the last few years. People used to take the train, now there are none," she said.

Mrs. Rittenhouse said an average of 17 buses pull into Stroudsburg every day "with three and four extra sections on buses over the weekend."

Mrs. Rittenhouse must be right. Only five trains roll through the mountains each day and some of these don't even stop at Cresco, Pocono Summit and Tobyhanna on their way to Scranton and points north and west.

Delaware Water Gap, once the home of three taxi companies and thousands of train passengers, is today the gateway to the Poconos because of the multi-million dollar Delaware River Bridge superhighway.

East Stroudsburg Woman Five-Gallon Blood Donor

FAST STROUDSBURG — An East Stroudsburg woman is Monroe County's sixth 5-gallon blood donor. Mrs. Thyra Shiffer of RD 2, reached that mark of high honor during a recent blood drive at the East Stroudsburg Methodist Church.

She didn't report it to Red Cross officials at the time because she was "ashamed I hadn't started giving sooner."

Mrs. Shiffer began her donations in 1952. Her husband, Elias, who had launched his blood donor career years earlier, tried many times to get her to give. "But I was always so scared," she said yesterday. After her first experience as a blood donor, Mrs. Shiffer lost "all those silly fears. There was really nothing to it, no pain whatever. In fact, I always feel so much better after I give."

She donates every two months and would give even more often, but Red Cross doctors request that eight weeks elapse between blood donations.

Receives Certificate
A certificate honoring Mrs. Shiffer for "distinguished service to humanity" was presented to her Tuesday by Jack Mullins, Monroe County Red Cross blood drive chairman.

In presenting the award, Mullins said, "The Red Cross and all of Monroe County salute you. You're a shining example of what an adult citizen can do for our community."

Other Monroe County 5-gallon blood donors, who were honored by the local Red Cross in June, are Tony Gallagher, George Garis, William Loder, Elias Wedger and James Oakley.

Camelback Buys Interest In Cherry Lane Playhouse

TANNERSVILLE — A stockholder group from Camelback Ski Corp. of Tannersville has purchased an interest in the Cherry Lane Playhouse, near Henryville, James A. Moore, Camelback president, and Ilea Hooker, vice president and producer of the theater, announced last night.

Moore's assistant, Kenneth A. Proctor, said negotiations are underway to move the entire theater to Camelback for the 1965 summer season.

"Problems remain to be solved before any final decision can be made, but both groups are extremely optimistic," Proctor said.

According to Moore, the theater will probably be located in the new addition to Camelback's base lodge now under construction.

Ultimately, Moore said, the theater may be located in a separate building used during the winter as a ski equipment rental facility.

Proctor said Camelback intends to develop a "four season recreational facility, serving both the needs of the community and Pocono tourists and vacationers."

Hooker said that a varied bill of dramas, musicals, jazz and ballet, encompassing all phases of the theater arts, will be offered during the 1965 season if negotiations are concluded successfully.

Hooker said that "attendance at the playhouse has increased over 30 per cent since last season and on several weekends we have had standing room only crowds. We need the extra space."

An innovation, to give theatergoers a chance to meet informally with some of the Cherry Lane performers, will be a weekly reception held each Monday on the outdoor patio at the theater during intermission, Hooker added.

Truck Driver Claims Area Blast Injuries

PHILADELPHIA — A truck driver who claims he was thrown about in the cab of his truck when a trailer loaded with 4,000 pounds of dynamite and 26,000 pounds of chemical compound exploded near Marshalls Creek June 26 instituted action Monday against the American Cyanamid Co., Inc., in U.S. Federal Court in Philadelphia.

Robert Shive of Sellersville, RD 1 seeks damages of less than $10,000 for injuries received as a result of the explosion that killed six persons and caused more than $500,000 damage.

Atty. Martin Philip of Palmerton, who filed the action for Shive, said his client received a punctured ear drum, a shoulder injury and bruises of the body.

Shive was transporting a load of bricks for the Atlas Service Co. of Quakertown, and was parked about 50 yards behind a station wagon near the scene at the time of the explosion. The suit charges the company with negligence, Philip said.

St. Swithin's Day: 40 Days Of Rain Or...

STROUDSBURG—Beware of rain today! Legend has it, that if it rains today—St. Swithin's Day—the heavens will open up and it will continue to rain for 40 days. An unknown author summed up the traditional English legend like this:

"St. Swithin's Day, if thou dost rain, for forty days it will remain; St. Swithin's Day, if thou be fair, for forty days (will) rain na mair."

St. Swithin was the Bishop of Winchester, England, who died July 15, 971. The story goes that if it rained on July 15, St. Swithin would be removed from his tomb.

St. Swithin is certainly not the patron saint of the Pocono Mountains. Think of what 40 days of rain would do to the resort business.

Rotarians Told Monroe Political Scene Healthy

MT. POCONO — "There is a not prevail in any degree here," The newspaperman also said, "You can hear rumbles in the county that people are tiring of federal handout programs; somewhat bitter about inflated defense contracts to keep a false economy; and disheartened about tongue-in-cheek civil rights platitudes."

Clark urged the Rotarians to take an interest in community political affairs. "It is your duty to see that the affairs of your respective regions are run by capable hands," he said.

"Don't let Monroe go the way of other counties and turn politics into a sham. Keep it healthy and riding high with the two-party system, waving assurance that there is no sure thing even in politics," he concluded.

President Al Stets was in charge of the meeting. John Kernner was program chairman.

Barry And The Press

While some newspapers have supported Senator Barry Goldwater, the vast majority of the 1,700 newspapers in America have opposed him.

This editorial opinion against Goldwater has led to some violent attacks by his supporters on "the rotten, Red Eastern press" and charges that Goldwater is not being fairly treated in the news columns, which are supposed to be objective, unbiased, and fair to all candidates.

The charge against the "Eastern press" ignores the fact that most of the newspapers in California, including the conservative Los Angeles Times, opposed him before he won the Republican primary there.

It is of course true that most of the Eastern press, including the staunchly Republican New York Herald Tribune, has criticized Goldwater. But this is national, not an Eastern newspaper position alone.

The accusation that Goldwater is not receiving fair treatment in the news columns is more serious because there have been instances in which his statements were oversimplified or left open to misinterpretation.

Goldwater himself contributes to such misinterpretations by vague, often contradictory statements, which he modifies, retracts or changes completely later.

His statement on the use of nuclear weapons to defoliate trees along Communist supply lines in Southeast Asia is a good example.

On a May 24 television program, Goldwater said, according to the transcript: "I would strongly advise that we interdict supply routes, wherever they may be, either by sea, or most importantly, through North Viet Nam, Laos or Cambodia..."

"There have been several suggestions made. I don't think we would use any of them. But defoliation of the forest by low yield atomic weapons could well be done. When you remove the foliage, you remove the cover."

The Associated Press story on this statement left out the sentence, "I don't think we would use any of them." His statement was therefore widely interpreted as a proposal to use nuclear weapons in Southeast Asia.

The wire service later corrected the story, but as Goldwater said, "The damage had been done." The difficulty is that even with the whole statement accurately and fully reported, most readers are left with the impression that dropping nuclear weapons "could well be done." It is an ambiguous statement at best.

Clare Booth Luce, wife of Henry Luce, publisher of Time and Life magazines which have supported Scranton for President, charged that the press was "brutally unfair" to Goldwater and that he was "Mr. Republican victim of 1964."

The fact is that Goldwater is getting a very good press. He is colorful, usually talkative, unusually quotable, and unafraid of newspapermen, as Nixon was in 1960.

Most newspapers which oppose Goldwater in their editorials are leaning over backwards to give him full, fair, objective and accurate news and headline reporting.

This newspaper editorially opposes Goldwater. We think his nomination will be bad for the Republican party and his election would be bad for the United States. It is our responsibility to state our opinions in our editorial comment.

But we feel strongly that it is our greater responsibility to report in news columns the arguments and actions of Barry Goldwater to our readers as fully and accurately as space and time allow.

Comment Of The Day

"Once this debate ends, let it be finished. Each of us—winner or loser—will have the satisfaction, if not of victory, of knowing that he has done his best, of knowing that by accepting the will of the majority there is hope—better than that—there is a good chance that the drift in our nation's affairs will end, that our party and its candidates will bring principle, firmness of purpose and integrity to the White House."

—Republican National Chairman William E. Miller calling for unity in the Republican party after the nominating convention.

Autograph Seekers

By George Dixon

SAN FRANCISCO — Every third adult here for the Republican National Convention seems to be carrying an autograph book. This sends my memory tumbling back a dozen years when something happened that made me wife and me want to flee from home and join the Lost Colony. It was when our youngest daughter, Stanlee, now grown up and a writer herself, discovered that her cherished autograph book was fifty percent fake.

Both political conventions were in Chicago in 1952. The Republican came first. My wife Ymelda, who has a catholic taste in Protestant friends, spent considerable time at the GOP outing with Mrs. George Gordon Moore, whose brother-in-law, Dwight D. Eisenhower, was about to be nominated for the Presidency.

Ymelda carefully let drop that her daughter had given her an autograph book with instructions to obtain some high-class signatures. "Mike" as the sister of Mamie Eisenhower is called, volunteered to handle the contract.

In less than twenty-four hours Mrs. Moore returned the book with a host of inscriptions, of which a few were: "Good Luck, Dwight D. Eisenhower," "Sincerely, Richard M. Nixon."

"Best wishes: Earl Warren."

There was also a "Kindest regards" from Henry Cabot Lodge, and the signatures of all three Warren girls.

About all you could say for these inscriptions was that they were genuine. Ymelda and I stayed on for the Democratic Convention. Here my loved one had connections too, but not as close as the top banana.

Moreover, she couldn't find anyone on whom to shunt Stanlee's autograph as a sign of the prospect of bracing the luminaries of the Democratic Party, autograph book in hand, she decided to do the sensible thing — fake the inscriptions.

Half a dozen of us became accomplices in the counterfeiting, using both hands. These were some of our more imaginative efforts: "To My Very Favorite Constituent: Adlai E. Stevenson," "Ever True: John F. Kennedy."

"I would like to shake you by the hand: Estes Kefauver." I took especial pride in one spurious autograph, which I executed with my left hand: "You will always be my leader: Lyndon B. Johnson."

We filled page after page of Stanlee's book with these triumphs: "The nation depends upon fine young women like you."

Harry S. Truman.

"I talk to you in my dreams: Hubert H. Humphrey."

A complete stranger, who somehow got into the game, supplied this one, which we voted tops in corn. "I will never wash my hands of you. Soapy Williams."

Stanlee read the Republican real McCoy's and remarked, with no enthusiasm, that she appreciated them. When she turned to the Democratic forgeries, she went into ecstasies. Having been lectured from infancy by her wildly non-partisan mother that some Republicans were almost as good as all Democrats, Stanlee made no audible comparisons, but every time she showed anyone her autograph book she opened to the phony inscriptions.

Our daughter got wise to the fakery in a way that scarcely could have been foreseen. She showed it to Senator Kefauver.

He blurted that it wasn't his signature!

I am revealing this now because trusting children all over the land are pressing autograph books on grownups going to the 1964 conventions, and this confession may serve to curb the incidence of forgery.

'Repudiated Candidate'

By Mason Denison

HARRISBURG — The question of the ultimate "status" of Governor Scranton in his new (to him) role of "repudiated candidate" at the moment is the subject of heated debate around Capitol Hill — both from the Democratic side and from his colleague-in-arms Republican side.

The simple fact is that up to the time of the current GOP presidential convention in San Francisco, Mr. Scranton has never lost in a bid for public office. Of course there have been only two such bids previously — one for Congress and the other for the governorship.

The titillating part about these two previous successful ventures lies in the fact that when he did win, he won against almost unbelievable odds, and won with astonishing majorities.

The presidential bid however, has proven his downfall, albeit his first downfall, and it could well write his political career of William Warren Scranton—or it conceivably could be the start of an entirely new career.

What is of more concern at the moment though is not so much what might be ahead for the young Keystone State chief executive after he finishes his tour of gubernatorial duty in January of 1967, as to just what his status might be during the remainder of his gubernatorial tenure.

Will it drop miserably, shoot up, or remain suspended in mid-air? The answer perhaps lies in an analysis of mixed feelings to be found around Capitol Hill at the moment.

For one thing, much of his strength in getting things done, or more specifically perhaps, his strength in working through many of his personal Administration programs, has revolved pretty much around the glowing prospect of his becoming a "great, great man" as a GOP presidential prospect.

Under such circumstances it was not felt propitious by Republican colleagues to try to back the Governor—legislatively, politically or any other way. With the possibility of top dog in the offing (with its obvious potential of returning rich rewards to the faithful one way or another) the shrewd political move was to go along with the Governor in his wishes.

This has been the pattern of the past — the more immediate past.

With this glow no longer hovering over the horizon, what now happens to Mr. Scranton and his prestige, status, or what-have-you, during the remainder of his term?

Unquestionably much of the force that has marked the Scranton Administration to date will piddle out as Mr. Scranton assumes the role of "just another Governor" but with the added tag of repudiated candidate for the presidency, etc.

Additionally, he faces the inescapable fact that during the two and a half remaining years of his tenure he will be plunging more deeply with each passing day into the quagmire of a "lame duck" chief executive.

When JFK Came To Pike

A day a president visited a hamlet is the theme of a publication just off the presses. The book, "When JFK Visited Pike County," is the work of newspapermen and photographers who were present the afternoon the late President John F. Kennedy "copied" into Milford Sept. 23, 1961.

Like the writers pined it was a day Pike Countians will never forget. The book's editor Norman Lehde also noted its historical value for future generations.

The 70 page, hard-covered informative publication serves a two-fold purpose. First, and quite naturally because of the events which followed the late president's visit, it contains a bird's-eye view of the estimated 10,000 who came and saw a man who more times than not would never get the chance to stop at such a small dot on the map.

Secondly, and the main reason John F. Kennedy was there, the book recognizes a home-town resident — the late Gov. Gifford Pinchot — for his accomplishments in the field of conservation.

There are sentences dealing with the efforts of Eugene McNamara, the district forester who used to be based in Stroudsburg. One story was written by Joseph Cusack former managing editor of the Stroudsburg Daily Record who now holds the same title with the Port Jervis (NY) Gazette. Of course, Red McLeod's (Record photographer) first-class shots of JFK are dotted throughout.

Lehde's leadership and the Pike County Chamber of Commerce's ingenuity produced a worthwhile piece of reading material which will never grow old too for the eyes.

It is a collector's item with its tidbits of sidelights that make up a less than two-hour visit by a president to an area. In detail, security, crowd-handling and other preparations are outlined.

One interesting point was brought out by a girl high school student who was allowed to hobnob with the press the day JFK came.

Her views were food for thought. She was worried somewhat that the 10,000 attendees paid little attention to the man who was honored that day.

Giving the president his due courtesy the young lass thought out loud that more feeling for Gifford Pinchot should have been forthcoming — especially since the Conservation Institute his former home — was dedicated that day.

This inconspicuous report by the teen age reporter gave balance to Lehde's publication, "When JFK Visited Pike County."

The Allen-Scott Report

Behind Barry's Success

SAN FRANCISCO — The single most influential delegate at the Republican National Convention is a six-foot-two, New York-born South Carolinian who is totally unknown to the public, is only nicknamed "big red," rules an extensive textile empire and is worth more than $100 million.

This unique political power is Roger Milliken, 48, married, has five children, lives in Spartanburg, S.C., calls Yale his alma mater, and is a dedicated friend, supporter and major financial backer of Senator Barry Goldwater from way back — starting in 1959 when they first met after a speech by the Arizona in Greenville, S.C.

To Milliken the views, concepts and preachments of Goldwater were true gospel and time has intensified this deeply held conviction.

At the 1960 Republican convention, Milliken felt so strongly about his champion that he personally put up all the money for a blitz drive and huge rally to nominate him for vice president, despite Nixon's avowed preference for Henry Cabot Lodge as running mate.

Only Goldwater's insistence on withdrawing in the interest of harmony, averted an explosive, headline-making clash.

This convention it's different, but one thing is the same. This time it is all Goldwater and, as four years ago, the unknown but all-powerful Milliken is in the inner center of the all-pervasive and irresistible Goldwater organization, quietly but firmly supervising and directing just about everything that it does.

Milliken has a key voice in every major decision and move, and most others, too. Also, he more than carries his share of footing the bills. Among the politicians, Milliken is admirably known as, "A man who puts his money where his mouth is."

Insiders rate him as Goldwater's most consistent and principal financial supporter.

How They Function — The two men are in constant touch through an elaborate communications network that Milliken established and paid for.

Operating from a downtown hotel through this network, Goldwater, all his numerous leaders and representatives in every delegation, plus a number of individuals can be reached in minutes, or less.

A top assistant of Milliken in this vital activity is John Greiner, 33-year-old Birmingham, Ala., lawyer. Also filling the key roles are Peter O'Donnell, Texas, founder of the original "Draft Goldwater Committee," and Wirt Yerger, Miss., head of the Southern Chairman's Conference.

In addition to personally knowing all Goldwater leaders and contacts at the convention and being in constant touch with them, Milliken knows or has instantly available everything that is deemed necessary to be known about every one of the 27 Southern delegates — and many others, from other sections.

This information covers pertinent personal, business and other "valuable" data.

As he does in directing his textile empire and other business interests, Milliken "pops" in, unannounced at delegations, headquarters, etc., for a personal check-up to make sure everything is proceeding as it should.

The South Carolinian is doing that in Goldwater's behalf, long before the convention.

A member of the potent finance committee of the National Committee, Milliken used this inner position to repeatedly ward off efforts of Goldwater rivals to bring big party contributor pressure to bear on delegates to switch.

Graphically illustrative of this tense backstage maneuvering was Milliken's instant and decisive counter to the challenge of a Scranton supporter on the finance committee, who hotly contended the $12.8 million "minimum" goal, set for the election campaign, could not be obtained if Goldwater were the nominee. "I'll guarantee this committee," retorted Milliken, "we can raise, most, if not all, of that in the South alone."

That ended the discussion. Another important score credited to Milliken is persuading New Jersey's Richard Sellers, treasurer of the National Committee, to swing over to Goldwater despite strenuous appeals by big financial supporters of Scranton to back him. Sellers' timely declaration for Goldwater is credited with undercutting a high-powered blitz to sweep New Jersey's 40-member delegation into the Scranton column.

Unquestionably, there are some psychosomatic aspects to all disease, because the mind (psyche) and the body (soma) are a unity and cannot be separated from each other. Therefore physical illness, pain or discomfort often affects the emotional state of patients, to varying degrees.

It is unfair, however, to disparagingly label your complaints as having no basis in fact. The diagnosis of real psychosomatic illness is a complex one. It requires as much expert knowledge as the diagnosis of a heart or lung condition.

"Psychosomatic" is an adjective that must not be used carelessly to suggest fraudulence, faking or malingering of disease.

I have been taking a tranquilizer for a year and a half. Is it dangerous to take it for such an extended period?

Dear Mrs. R.: Tranquilizers, like many other medicines, are meant to serve a purpose for a definite period of emotional or physical illness. Unlimited use of drugs without the specific advice of the physician is unwise.

End The Treatment If You Love Him

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband got a post card from the post office asking him if he wanted to KEEF his post office box. I never knew he HAD a post office box, so I asked him a few questions, such as, why he needed a post office box.

His answers didn't make much sense so I knew he was hiding something. I finally got it out of him that he had met a young woman while he was away on a business trip last year.

He said there was nothing serious between them, they just wanted to correspond with each other.

He said she was a "nice" girl who was married, but not happily. He promised he would never write to her again.

He has really tried awfully hard to make it up to me ever since, Abby.

Divorce is not in my vocabulary, and I really love the guy. How much longer should I make him sleep on the couch?

DISILLUSIONED

DEAR DISILLUSIONED: Invite him in tonight. You have both suffered long enough.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law has the habit of saying, "Our son's this and our son's that." The house is Robert's, the children are Robert's, and everything is Robert's.

I heard her telling a neighbor about "Robert's wedding," so I stepped in and said, "Excuse me, Mother dear, but MY father paid for it."

Then she laughed and said,

"Yes, but Robert has been paying ever since." I am so sick of hearing references to Robert alone, as though he had no wife, that I was just about ready to give him back to her. What can I do about a situation like this?

READY TO BURST

DEAR READY: Make up your mind that you will not permit anything she says to get you down, or the ulcer you develop will be your own.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old man with a better-than-average education. All my friends are married and I have been looking for a wife. I have gone with any number of fine young women who have had all the qualities I desire in a wife, but the moment they show any interest in me I lose all interest in them.

Is there something wrong with me? There is an old saying: "The fruit at the top of the tree — beyond one's reach — is always the sweetest?" Why is this so, and what does one do about it?

JOHN

DEAR JOHN: You'd be wise to cultivate a taste for the fruit within your reach. It's as sweet as the fruit at the top of the tree, but apparently you don't really want it — you just enjoy reaching.

CONFIDENTIAL TO ALAN: It isn't necessary to blow out the other fellow's candle in order to make your own shine brightly.

Speaking Of Your Health:

Doctor, I'd Like To Know

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

MY SON IS 14 years old. When we went on a hunting trip, he hurt his leg. The doctor found that the leg injury was minor but that he has a curvature of the spine which needs correction. Could a slight leg injury have caused this condition of the spine?

Mr. L. V., Minnesota

Dear Mr. V.: Since it takes years for the spine to become distorted, it is hardly likely that the injury you describe could be responsible for the curvature of the spine.

This condition can sometimes remain unnoticed for long periods of time and is often discovered only incidentally during a routine examination.

There are many different causes of curvature of the spine. Before any treatment is begun the exact cause must be carefully determined.

Present-day techniques of X-ray examination, supported by clinical, neurological and orthopedic findings, are useful in discovering the cause and determining the ideal course of treatment for each individual case.

In this instance, your son's minor leg injury could be considered a fortunate mishap, since it "accidentally" drew attention to a more serious condition which can now be corrected without further delay.

Whenever I complain of any pain or discomfort, my husband and my 24-year-old daughter think I am a hypochondriac and always say it is "psychosomatic." Aren't there any real pains, any more?

MRS. E. P., Texas

Dear Mrs. P.: The term "psychosomatic" has unfortunately been bandied about and misused by many who do not know its real meaning and its significance.

Unquestionably, there are some psychosomatic aspects to all disease, because the mind (psyche) and the body (soma) are a unity and cannot be separated from each other. Therefore physical illness, pain or discomfort often affects the emotional state of patients, to varying degrees.

Stories Behind Words

by William S. Penfield

Person

Today, skillful makeup men can drastically change the appearance of an actor to fit the character he is to portray. The makeup technique was unknown to Roman and Greek actors, but they had a graphic way of letting the audience know the character that was being portrayed.

Each actor wore a large mask which indicated whether the character was young, old or middle-aged, sickly or robust.

The Romans called such a mask "persona." The name was transferred to the character portrayed, and then to any human being. "Persona" became "person" in Old French and "person" in English.

Please help your Daily Record newsboy become a better independent merchant...

Please pay him on his collection day...

He will record your payment on his punch card as a permanent record of the transaction... visible proof to you and himself that payment has been made.

Your newspaper boy is a "little merchant." He buys his newspapers at wholesale and sells them to his customers at retail. The difference is his profit and operating capital. If you fail to pay him every week, he has to take the profit from several customers that have paid to pay for your newspaper. His account is due each Saturday. So, help this "young businessman" by paying him the first time he calls.

You help yourself to better service and help him, by paying regularly each week.

LAYERED FRESH PEACH CREAM PIE is light as air and topped with sliced fresh peaches, and fancy enough for a company dessert but can be prepared ahead of time.

Local Peaches Perfect For Those Who Like To Fuss Or Hate To Cook

By Linda Pipher
Daily Record Home Economist

Stroudsburg — Maybe you noticed that there weren't many fresh peaches in the markets during June, Georgia, the Carolinas, and Alabama supply us with peaches during June, but if you remember, those states were severely hit with excessive cold in late March when peaches were just beginning to get a start.

Fortunately, peach production isn't limited to this one area, for peaches are grown in nearly every state and commercially in 35. Pennsylvania, by the way, is one of the leading states that furnishes 1,700, 000,000 pounds for the fresh market each year!

It won't be long before we'll have local peaches, but there are some available in the markets now, and we all look forward to having this succulent fruit. They are good for us, too, for they are an excellent source of Vitamin A and there are only 77 calories in a whole cupful of sliced peaches.

To make a fresh peach pie, slice peaches into my pie plate until it is heaping full and then pour them into a bowl and add 1/4 cup flour, 1 cup sugar, and a sprinkle of nutmeg. After tossing together, I let the peaches set to draw juice while I make the pastry, and then bake in a 425 degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes.

If you would like to try a fan-

Local Disaster Front Page News In Far West, Too

Saylorsburg — Mrs. Lenora Hildbrandt, who has been visiting her daughter in South Gate, California, got news from home the hard way.

While touring in Nevada, they bought the Carson City Nevada Appeal to find the Marshall Creek explosion front page news. Mrs. Hildbrandt sent a letter sheet from the paper, and wrote "The Herald Examiner, the Los Angeles paper, also carried the article on the front page," she added.

During her trip, they visited Lake Tahoe, Carson City, Virginia City, Reno, and Sparks in Nevada. They also saw the parade of 300 antique autos with the drivers in the costume of the same vintage, even to their luggage. Mrs. Hildbrandt enjoyed the scenery, except for the roads in the High Sierras, and wrote that she thinks everyone should see it once, but adds lovingly "and I advise these Californians to see Pennsylvania, too."

cy peach pie as the one pictured above, here is a recipe that comes from the best kitchens of the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association.

Layered Fresh Peach Cream Pie

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup milk
- 2 large eggs, separated
- 1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
- 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup heavy cream, whipped
- 9-inch pastry pie shell
- 3 cups (9 medium) sliced fresh peaches
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice

Water 1 1/2 teaspoons cornstarch

Soften gelatin in water. Set aside. Combine the 1/2 cup sugar, salt, milk and egg yolks in a saucepan or top part of a double boiler. Mix well. Stir and cook over very low heat or hot water (not boiling) until custard coats a metal spoon. Remove from heat and stir in gelatin, vanilla extract, and lemon peel. Chill until mixture is partially set. Beat egg whites until they stand in soft, stiff peaks, into which gradually beat in remaining 1/4 cup sugar.

Fold into the mixture, along with whipped cream. Turn half the mixture into a baked 9-inch pastry shell. Top with 2 cups sliced fresh peaches. Cover with remaining gelatin mixture. Chill until filling is firm and ready to serve. In the meantime, combine remaining peaches, the 2 tablespoons sugar and lemon juice. Cover and chill 1 hour or until juice has formed in the bowl. Drain juice into a measuring cup and add water to make 1/2 cup. Blend in cornstarch. Stir and cook 3 minutes or until juice has thickened slightly and is transparent. Cool thoroughly. Arrange sliced peaches over the top, over which spoon the glaze. Chill until ready to serve.

Now that's a recipe that will challenge those of you who like to fuss in the kitchen! If you would rather try something with peaches that takes less time, try this one:

Fresh Peach Compote

- 6 firm, ripe fresh peaches
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon fresh lime juice
- 1 cup water
- dash salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pure almond extract

Wash and peel peaches. Cut in half and remove pits. Combine the next 4 ingredients in a 1 quart saucepan. Bring to boiling point and boil 1 to 2 minutes. Add peaches, cover and cook 6 to 8 minutes or until peaches are tender, but yet hold their shape. Add almond extract and cool peaches in the syrup. Chill and serve as dessert. Yield: 6 servings.

For those of you looking for a quick dessert, here's a recipe that can be whipped up in a hurry:

Tasty Peach Crisp

- 1 quart fresh peach slices
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
- One-third cup sifted All Purpose flour
- 1 cup uncooked Quick Cooking Oatmeal
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- One-third cup melted butter or margarine

Place drained peaches in 8-inch baking dish. Sprinkle with nutmeg and cinnamon. Combine flour, oats, brown sugar and butter, mix until crumbly. Sprinkle mixture over peaches. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 minutes.

If you like this dessert, you may want to save the recipe to use next winter; substitute two No. 2 1/2 cans drained peach slices for the fresh peaches.

Just Between Us—

by Bobby Westbrook

After a week, during which, as a member of the press, I was given the VIP treatment in New York, wine, dined and taken through World's Fair exhibits with no waiting in line, like visiting royalty, it's very healthy to come home where the press is considered as a non-member secretary of countless organizations, useful mainly in announcing meeting plans.

And I'm not being sarcastic: It is a healthier situation. In theory, I am against special privilege for anybody. It's not fair to the thousands waiting in line for as long as an hour to have somebody slip in ahead of them without waiting at all. In practice, it's very, very pleasant experience.

Actually, my Cinderella week ended before I got home; in the bus depot to be exact. All week long we had been collecting samples of every imaginable product from false eye-lashes and coffee colored lipstick to medicine chests, a lot of them very large and very heavy, but by wearing practically all the clothes I'd taken down, I managed to cram them all in two suitcases and an airline bag.

But the final day was a busy one. We stopped at the Brasserie Restaurant to pick

Don't Miss Our SUMMER DRESS Clearance...

Whenver Grace Sporer endorses a fashion, I know that it's unquestionably smart. For my money, she's one of our town's genuinely "well dressed ladies," and, like Kate Mullins, would be terrific in anything—even a burlap bag. That's why I looked twice at the new Schrank "Lounge Shifts" of drip dry, no-iron, all-cotton sateen, on display in our Lingerie Department. These transitional cottons are of Autumn Leaf Print in a swirling riot of rich color—reds, purples, and deep greens on beige. The shifts come in S, M, and L sizes at 6.00. At 7.00 there are matching long pajamas. The pants are cut on the bias to assure a certain stretch quality and are solid red. The coat is figured. What a brief moment it seems since we blossomed out in the flowery prints of Spring . . . and here we are in Autumn leaves falling on transitional cotton.

I do love capes . . . don't you? And I do love Pendleton wools . . . don't we all! Put the two together and they add up to high fashion in a Cape Suit of black and white. The skirt is slim, to emphasize the dramatic width of the cape. The price is a "pared to the bone" 10.00. Just between us, I can't imagine anything that costs so little looking so all-fired important. But see for yourself . . . in our 2nd floor Sportswear department.

Think of Fall, you naturally think of school opening, college dormitories bulging at the seams, and youngsters worrying once again over homework assignments. And when you think of dormitories, you also think of pretty girls in flattering sleep and lounge wear.

One of the cutest sets of Sleep Shirt and Bloomers I've seen, is on display in our Lingerie Department, and is a blue and white stripe with a wide bib at the front, outlined by a ruffle an inch-or-so-wide. The bib itself is vertically striped with bright red rick rack of varied widths. Sizes are S, M, and L, with a matching long pajama, sizes 32 to 38. Each is priced at 6.00, and is just what a sleepy-time gal might have in mind when she dons her "best bib and tucker for a dormitory supper."

Newspaper's Classroom Use Stressed In Blair Talk

Editor's note: The following article was written by Linda Bosman, East Stroudsburg High School senior who is attending Blair Academy under a summer Journalism scholarship offered by The Daily Record.

BLAIRSTOWN, N. J. — Marjorie W. Longley, manager of the School and College Service for the New York Times, spoke to the students of Blair Academy's Summer School for Journalism on the topic, "The Newspaper in the Classroom."

"The newspaper in the classroom is really precreation," Miss Longley said. "It is instrumental in producing the intelligent and informed citizens necessary to the preservation of our democratic society."

As a teaching device, Miss Longley described the newspaper as "a dynamic, vital, alive text."

She explained it is needed as a supplementary text especially in the field of social studies, because it is a much more accurate and up-to-date source of material than many textbooks in use.

The newspaper is used as a "motivational tool" by teachers in that by reading a newspaper the student is motivated to think about the important issues of the day, to evaluate them, and to formulate opinions on them.

"Learning how to learn is the greatest value of school," Miss Longley said. She emphasized the importance of building and strengthening study and learning skills and habits which are invaluable to everyone even after he has finished his formal education whether at high school or college level.

"The newspaper is being used in the classroom to exercise these skills," she pointed out. Miss Longley referred to the newspaper as "the guardian of our democratic society," because it plays an important part in informing and instructing the American people.

Must Inform Citizens She asserted that without independent, intelligent and informed citizens our society cannot exist. The newspaper can give facts, interpret them and give an opinion, but all it does is work things if the reader doesn't critically read the news, think about it, and develop understanding of it.

An important goal of the newspaper in the classroom is to train young Americans to read the newspaper daily so that when they become adults, they can make the firm foundation of our democracy.

RATES REDUCED AGAIN FOR ELECTRIC HOME HEATING AND ALL-ELECTRIC LIVING!

It's always good news when costs go down. And for families with electrically-heated homes, this is the third substantial rate reduction in the last six years! Since the first electric heat installation in this area—these three big rate reductions have amounted to an average of 23.5%!

The present reduction provides an annual saving of about one month's budget bill. You couldn't ask for better evidence that it's now more practical than ever to give your family the advantages of electric heat and all-electric living.

No other heating system can provide all the benefits you get with electric heat. It's absolutely unequalled for comfort—flexibility—cleanliness—safety—and trouble-free operation. And remember this. In the last six years, no other cost has gone down as much as the cost of electricity! There's never been a better time to find out why all-electric living is modern living!

Call your nearest Metropolitan Edison Company office to find out how little electric heat will cost for your home.

Here's A Typical Example Of Savings

This example, representing a typical electric heating customer, shows how much the cost of all-electric living has come down in only six years.

Year	Annual Savings
1958	$57.76
1963	21.80
1964 (NEW RATE)	33.90

Today this family pays $113.46 less for electricity than in 1958!

Electric Rates Go Down—Down—Down! Average 23.5% Reduction For Electric Home Heating And All-Electric Living Since 1958!

Most Other Living Costs Have Gone Up—Up—Up! No Other Cost Has Gone Down As Much As Electricity!

Roseto Loses Bid For Injunction

ROSETO — Judge Clinton Budd Palmer has lifted a temporary injunction and refused to enter a permanent injunction against the Township of Washington interfering with the Borough of Roseto in disposing of garbage, rubbish and refuse upon borough-owned land in the township.

Roseto Borough asked the court for an injunction after the township filed charges against Roseto Borough employees in May for violating a township ordinance against dumping.

A hearing was held in court June 29. Judge Palmer, in his opinion, said: "We are satisfied from the evidence that the supervisors of Washington Twp. in a proper exercise of the police power, enacted the instant ordinance in order to abate a health hazard. The operation of an open garbage dump naturally creates a stench in the area burdensome to local residents. Also, it is a breeding ground for rats and mosquitoes and in addition violates the regulations
